Opposes Ratification of Locarno Treaties

Nationalist Party on Germany Goes on Record as Hostile to Adoption of Pacts of Peace.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—The nationalist party, in convention day, passed a resolution declaring against the Locarna securities pacts as a "grave menace to Germany's freedom." The resolution pledges the party to fight against ratification. A resolution was also passed declaring that the allies concessions in relaxing their hold upon the Rhine are insufficient. The question of war guilt was also brought up and the convention demanded a revocation of charges against Germany as responsible for the war.

The convention arose in tumultous applause when Count Westarp, the nationalist leader, urged the restoration of the Bismark Reich and the Hohenzollern monarchy. Two former cabinet ministers who swore allegiance to the Republic, joined in the demonstration.

CHINA'S FATE NOT YET SURE

NO APPRECIABLE PROGRESS IS BEING MADE THERE.

NATIVES NOT HONEST

Missionary Tells Of Customs Of People—Musgrave Says World Needs An Awakened Conscience.

"When our ancestors were killing their enemies, eating their flesh, and drinking blood from their skulls, the people of China were living in brick houses, sitting in upholstered chairs eating with ivory chop sticks from ebony tables, and reading literature, already classic," C. C. Merriott, Baptist missionary from Chinkiang, China, said in a talk at the First Baptist Church yesterday morning.

"The deplorable thing about China," the missionary continued, "is that no appreciable progress is being made. Truly, the West is coming into China, but in many cases it is coming in the wrong way. For instance, the teapot which one time occupied such a conspicuous place, is being superceded by the whiskey bottle. And it is not the rice whiskey of China, but the stuff from other countries."

Dr. Merriott told of the extreme greed, avarice, and lack of honesty in China. "There is not a single large business in the whole country which does not have a foreigner for a treasurer, and even the post office department has foreign executives. The Chinese cannot be trusted.

"China is a land of sin," the speaker continued. "Sin you have never dreamed of; sin that even the devil could not introduce into Maryville.

"China has the idea that the entire world is built around her; that everything centers around the 'middle kingdom.'

"For many thousands of years, the chief god of China has been the emperor. Annually he pays tribute to his god, and the rest of the time the people pay tribute to him. That is one of the reasons that there is extreme greed and lack of principle among the ruling classes of China."

Dr. Merriott told of the Boxer uprising in China, and of the fact that it had merely been incentive for Christianity to move forward more rapidly.

He told of disease in that country and of the people's conception that it was necessary as placation to the gods. In speaking of marriage, he said that almost every woman in China is married and the mother of several children before she is 20 years old.

He also said that eighty-five out of every 100 babies in China die before they are one year old.

"We must not form our estimate of China from the natives we see over here. In many cases, the better class is represented among the students of Chinese birth in American schools. The situation in China cannot be under-rated. Christianity must act and act at once."

What America and the world needs now is an awakened conscience for good, said the Rev. R. E. Musgrave, pastor of the First Christian Church in his sermon yesterday morning. Man's conscience must not be deadened but must be kept alive in order to point out right and wrong, he added.

"The problem of religious education is one of the greatest facing America at the present time," Mr. Musgrave continued. "We will soon find it necessary to teach our boys and girls religion in our public schools. This would serve to awaken the conscience of America's youth.

"The conscience must not be deadened. Like a compass to the mariner, it serves as a compass to right and wrong in our every-day life."

No Indications That Coal Strike Will End

Tieup Now Starts on Twelfth Week—Coolidge Assumes New and Perhaps Significant Policy

Washington, Nov. 5.—The twelfth week of the hard coal strike began today with no indication of any weakening in the government's policy of keeping hands off and permitting the miners and operators to go to a finished fight. President Coolidge is persuing in this strike a new and perhaps significant federal policy toward the major industries during strikes. It is a policy of not pampering operators or miners during a coal strike.

Mrs. Lansdowne Will Face Accused Officer

Capt. Paul Foley Called Before Shenandoah Inquiry Board To Answer Widow's Sensational Charges.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Accused and accuser will be brought face to face tomorrow before the naval court of inquiry investigating the Shenandoah crash, it was indicated today when the court met privately and then adjourned to permit the new judge-advocate, Major Henry Leonard, marine corps, to become familiar with the case.

Capt. Paul Foley, who resigned as judge-advocate after Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the Shenandoah, charged Foley tried to get her to give "false testimony," is the accused and Mrs. Lansdowne is the accuser.

SEAL SALE TO OPEN ON DEC. 1

THE COUNTY IS ORGANIZED FOR FIGHT ON TUBERCULOSIS.

INVESTMENT RETURNED

Seals Furnish Attractive Decoration As Well As Protect Community Health.

The eighteenth annual Christmas Seal sale campaign, which is carried on throughout the United States, will be officially opened in Missouri on December 1. The Christmas Seal sale is for the purpose of financing the national, state and county fight on tuberculosis. The seal sale is often confused with Red Cross work but has no connection whatever with it.

The campaign has been organized in this county and Leslie G. Somerville, president of the Nodaway County Tuberculosis Association, is directing the sale throughout the county.

Present indications point to a record breaking sale, because of the past activities of the Nodaway County Tuberculosis Association in conducting educational campaigns, clinics, home visiting and individual instruction in tubercular cases.

Speaking of the sale, Mr. Somerville said today

"I wish we might see a 'For Health' Christmas Seal on every letter and package that is mailed in our community during December, sending out the news that we are doing our share in the campaign to wipe out tuberculosis and to make possible a public health program in our county, returning many times to each one his investment in the penny seals through improved community health.

"The purchase of these seals is not charity, for the little stamps are as attractive as anyone can buy to decorate Christmas packages and letters, and are at the same time an investment in self-protection, because, until tuberculosis is entirely controlled, no one is absolutely safe from the disease.

"The Christmas Seal sale is one in which every man, woman and child can help and by each giving a little we will be able to raise a fund which will make possible free clinics, health lectures, the purchase of health books and Modern Crusade material for our schools and other valuable health projects in our own county.

"Let's all buy and use Christmas Seals to our limit and place our community high on the list of towns making the largest contribution for this life-saving work."

Plans for the campaign in this county will be discussed at a dinner to be held Wednesday night at the Maryville Country Club.

EDUCATION AID TO FRIENDSHIP

WAR BRINGS NEW UNDERSTANDING OF PROBLEMS.

GOOD WILL IS NEEDED

Education Week Program Is Held At Maryville High School This Morning—Band Gives Selections.

"The great World War taught the world that nations did not understand each other. The aftermath was thinking along that line," declared Dr. Fred Keller, of the College, this morning, in an address to the student body of the Maryville High School, at a patriotic assembly, a feature of Education Week.

"Through education the world should be able to understand the motives of peace and the horrors of war. We should always love America, but ward off hatred of other nationalities. Foreigners are pretty much like us," he said. "They have their human problems to meet first as we do."

The Rev. S. P. Allison, of the First Presbyterian Church, in his talk, said, "It is no trouble to see that education makes for better citizenship. Education should be thought in the terms of our national and world life. To understand other nations we have to understand their lack of education and advantages. No great man ever snares at education; a student cannot."

"The future lies in the need of supreme education," Mr. Allison said. "Education that will make strong thinkers, strong, open-minded men and women and to combine with the service of the world in putting these forces to action."

Touching upon the League of Nations he declared, "that the League was ridiculed and held without consideration on the part of the nation."

Ralph Graves, president of the History Club, speaking on "patriotism and Citizenship," said that patriotism should not be demonstrated in war alone, but the great time for patriotism is in peacetime. He emphasized that students in carrying their full share of responsibility should adhere to law and aid the officers of law through cooperation in law abiding principles.

Donald Aley, president of the student body, speaking on "Educational Week," pointed out that service should be uppermost to high school students. Service, he said has wonderful chances to be used through educational obtainment.

Miss Edwyna Forsyth, in her address on "Patriotism and Its Influence on Character," said the need of the sick and wounded world was international understanding and the continual adherence to American ideals and principles.

The assembly was given by the History Club, of which Miss Bertha Northcutt is the sponsor. Walter Allen acted as chairman during the program, which was as follows.

State Fair Board in Special Plan Meeting

Sixteen Members Are Present At Session Called By C. D. Bellows—Officers Will Be Appointed.

Kansas City, Nov. 16.—Plans for the 1926 state fair at Sedalia were discussed today at a session of members of the Missouri state fair board here. Sixteen members of the board attended a special session called by C. D. Bellows of Maryville, president of the organization. The board began the preparation of a budget for next year's fair. The various department superintendents and officers for the coming air also will be appointed before the session concludes tomorrow.

A meeting of the state board of agriculture, the membership of which is identical with the fair board, will be held this afternoon, John F. Case, president, announced. Annual reports of the board will be read and discussed.

COURT EXTENDS LIFE OF NODAWAY DISTRICT.

NEED THREE LATERALS

Main Ditch Has Been Dug But Partly Filled By Debris—Land in Three Counties.

A decree from the circuit court of Holt County was filed today with Mrs. Mamie Clardy, recorder of deeds for Nodaway County, extending for twenty years and corporate existance of Nodaway Drainage District No. 1, which embraces between 5,000 and 6,000 acres of land in Holt, Andrew and Nodaway counties.

This drainage district was incorporated on June 13, 1905, for a term of twenty years. The land is along the Nodaway river, which divides the three counties. Most of it is in Holt County.

The original plan for drainage of the district provided for the deepening, widening and straightening of the Nodaway river and also for the construction of two lateral ditches in Holt County and one lateral ditch in Andrew County. A main ditch, about eight miles in length, was constructed, but on account of insufficient funds the three laterals never have been opened. Meanwhile the main ditch has become filled with sediment, logs, trees and other debris and is badly in need of cleaning, widening and deepening.

The water which should be cared for by the lateral ditches now spreads over valuable farm lands within the boundaries of the district, rendering them non-productive for agricultural purposes. The Holt County circuit court holds that the completion of the original plan for drainage is "a matter of public necessity for sanitary and agricultural purposes, and that the reclamation of the same by drainage or otherwise will be conductive to the public health, convenience and welfare and of great public utility and benefit."

The proposal to extend the existence of the drainage district was presented to the land owners last April and the votes in favor of such an extension represented 1,869 acres, while only 39½ acres were opposed.

J. W. Patterson is the present president of the board of supervisors for the drainage district, and William M. Morris is secretary and treasurer. Other members of the board are William N. Hodgin, Lafayette Kunkel, Wesley Hodgin and R. B. Bridgeman.

Mexican Railway Deal Temporarily Delayed

El Paso, Nov. 16.—Major Max Venson of the Robert Venson & Co., British bankers, en route to Mexico by the way of El Paso, to negotiate the return of the Mexican National Railways to private ownership, was detained by Mexican authorities in Juarez today because he could not show vaccination certificates.

More Earth Tremors Noted at St. Louis U.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—A severe earth tremor was recorded on the seismograph at St. Louis University here today. The quake began at 6 o'clock, reached it greatest intensity at 6:07 o'clock, and lasted until 6:58 o'clock. The distance was estimated at 1,700 miles from here.

NO SUCCESSOR FOR WOODSON

GOVERNOR WILL NOT APPOINT UNTIL AFTER FUNERAL.

ELECTION NEXT YEAR

Death of Aged Supreme Court Justice Comes in Hospital After Several Weeks' Illness.

Kansas City, Nov. 16.—Supreme court judges, former governors, political leaders and circuit court judges will serve as honorary pall-bearers tomorrow afternoon at the funeral of Judge A. M. Woodson in St. Joseph. The body will be taken to St. Joseph this afternoon.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the First Christian Church. The Rev. Chilton will officiate.

Jefferson City, Nov. 16.—Governor Baker said today he would not consider the appointment of a successor to the late Judge A. M. Woodson, who died yesterday in Kansas City, until after the funeral tomorrow.

A. M. Woodson, Jr., son of the former chief justice, will leave at noon for Kansas City to join the funeral party.

Mrs. Loraine Robinson, only daughter of the late judge, was in Kansas City at the bedside when the end came.

It is the general opinion at the capital that Governor Baker will select a successor to Judge Woodson Wednesday or Thursday. Representative David W. Peters of this city is an announced candidate for the Republican nomination as justice of the supreme court, but he cannot be appointed because of the constitutional provision against members of the legislature receiving state offices by appointment.

Election Next November.

The appointment by Governor Baker will continue until the election next November and it is a reasonable conclusion that this appointee will be a candidate for the Republican nomination.

Among those mentioned today in connection with the appointment were former Judge Arch B. Davis of Chillicothe, who resigned from the circuit bench several months ago to enter the private practice of law, and Robert Davis of Frederickstown, prominent in southeastern Missouri.

Other possible candidates for appointment by Governor Baker include:

Alfred M. Seddon of Kansas City, a commissioner of the supreme court.

W. F. Frank of Kirksville, former circuit judge and now an assistant attorney-general.

George W. Crowder of Carthage, an assistant attorney-general.

A General Breakdown.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 16.—A. M. Woodson, 71, chief justice of the Missouri state supreme court, died in a local hospital Sunday, following an illness of several weeks. He came here Sept. 30 from his home in Jefferson City, suffering from a general breakdown.

Judge Woodson rallied after entering the hospital and for the last week had dressed and been able to walk about the hospital daily. Sunday, however, he suffered an attack of cardiac asthma, which affected his heart.

Judge Woodson became ill about the middle of September. Against the advice of attending physicians, who diagnosed his ailment as nervous disorders, Judge Woodson continued discharging his duties and his condition steadily grew worse.

Born in Kentucky.

Archelaus M. Woodson was born in Knox county, Kentucky, January 20, 1854, but spent most of his life in Missouri. His father emigrated from Kentucky and located in Lafayette county, this state, when Judge Woodson was only 9 months old.

A year later the family removed to Buchanan county and the Woodsons settled on a farm near Faucett. Judge Woodson attended the schools of Buchanan county until he was 18 years old. For a period of three years he attended Plattsburg college in Clinton coun-

FORMS OF ABSENT MINDEDNESS.

An early English philosopher and chronicler once drew a distinction between "a man who is absent-minded because he thinks of something else and a man who is absent-minded because he thinks of nothing at all."

The world has known of chronic cases of absent-mindedness where the victim not through deep thought, but through absence of all thought, is habitually unconscious of all that happens about him. There is another form of wakeful unconsciousness most often called absent-mindedness, but which more truly comes under the name of concentration.

The ability to concentrate is acquired by few but coveted by all. It is the power to fix the mind upon one thing to the exclusion of all else. The student who can concentrate and does, learns more rapidly and thoroughly than his less fortunate fellow. Concentration solves the problems and the businessman more wisely and with economy of time. Great inventions, immortal thoughts and inspired thoughts have all been the fruits of concentration.

Association of the word "Concentration" with education implies the instruction of the student in the intricacies of thinking and reasoning. There can be no "pure" reasoning without concentration. The criticism is often heard that modern methods of education are not conductive to reasoning and concentration. Time only will tell whether the study of the classic languages and mental arithmetic or the less romantic languages and manual training develop the most thinkers and supply humanity with the attribute of concentration and reasoning.

RED MAN'S TRIBE INCREASES.

For decades and for some reason, now unknown, the public has been under the impression that the American Indian has been rapidly approaching extinction as a race. Perhaps the average person, if examined on the subject, would express the belief that it is only a matter of a few generations before the last full-blooded Indian will have gone to his fathers.

It must have been with amazement coupled with incredulity, that many received the census bureau's announcement of an increase of 2,693 in the country's Indian population during the year ended June 30. But one is puzzled even more by census figures showing a gain of 18,976 in the Indian population in the last twelve years, that there are 120,163 Indians in the state of Oklahome, and that there are now 6,135 Indians living in New York state.

Better living conditions, economic prosperity and the beneficial effects of civilizing influences probably account for the growing Indian population. That the race has survived to this time is remarkable, although there now seems to be no valid reason why it should not multiply. The red man is no longer made the target for the white man's rifle and many tribes have become fabulously wealthy from oil discovered on the Oklahoma lands the white man's government believed barren and worthless and therefore set aside as reservations for native Americans.

The annual turkey shortage is about to begin.

Coolidge Gets Some Tips From Count Volpi

Presidents Hears Story Of Abolition Of Useless Boards And Bureaus In Italian Government.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

Washington—President Coolidge, one of whose main ambitions, as everybody knows, is to rid the government of every bureau, division, commission and board it can possibly do without, and to consolidate the rest, got a lot of valuable tips from Count Giuseppe Volpi di Misurata, while the Italian debt settlement negotiations were going on here.

As Premier Mussolini's minister of finance, the count took a leading part in boiling the Rome government down to a fraction the size of the unwieldy thing the fascist chieftain found on his hands when he proclamed his dictatorship.

It was just the story to fall like music on the thrifty presidential ear. Some say that, from the minute he heard it, the national executive favored giving the Italians better terms. But that's a joke.

At any rate, self-contained as he usually is, all accounts agree that he glowed with interest and admiration as Volpi described, through an interpreter, the thoroughness of Mussolini's job.

More than 50 bureaus were abolished in three years, personnel, offices, duties and all. Many others were merged. The economy amounted to millions and the government, the count said, is more efficiently administered today than ever before. Of course, this is the fascist version, Volpi being one. Evidently others dispute it, or Mussolini's assassination wouldn't have been attempted a few days ago.

Senator Smoot, one of the American debt negotiators, is quoted as wondering why the Italian premier hasn't done anything toward consolidating some of Finance Minister Count Giuseppe Volpi di Misurata's rather numerous titles and names.

Students Organize Clyde Helpful Club

Mildred Anderson Is Elected President Of New Group—Constitution Is Adopted.

The students of Clyde School have organized a club, which they have named the C. H. C., standing for "Clyde Helpful Club." A constitution and by-laws were framed, and the following officers were elected:

President, Mildred Anderson; Vice-president, Wilma Florea; Secretary, Melvin Davis; Assistant Secretary, Dorothy Anderson; Treasurer, Wilbur Gillespie.

The colors decided upon were blue and gold. The club banner will be 24 by 48 inches, made of blue cloth and golden ribbon.

The following articles were decided upon to form the constitution:

I I will control my tongue, my temper, and my thoughts; and not let them speak mean, vulgar or profane words; I will not be impudent, for I will not be a slave to temper.

II Self-conceit is silly. I will listen to the advice of older and wiser people. I will learn to think for my self, act for myself, and choose for myself. I will not be afraid to do right.

III I will be honest and truthful in word, play and act. I will not do wrong; for I cannot hide the truth from others. I will not take things that do not belong to me.

IV I will not cheat, but will play for the love of playing. I will be a good loser, as well as a good winner.

V I will find out what my duty is; what I ought to do, I will do.

VI I will learn all I can, take an interest in my work. I will do all I can.

VII In what ever work I do with others, I will do my part, and will help other to do theirs. Envy spoils the work of the worker.

VIII I will be kind to others, in speech, act ands deeds. I will not gossip, nor will I speak unkindly of anyone.

IX I will be loyal to my family, school and country. I will obey and help other pupils to obey; I will respect wishes of others.

X I will be clean in all work and thoughts.

XI I will keep my clothes, my body and my mind clean. I will avoid habits that harm me.

This constitution was signed by all pupils.

Says Crane Poems Are not Her Own Writings

Honorary President Of National Society Calls Them "Hoax"—Father Heatedly Denies Charge.

New York, Nov. 16. (United Press)—Whether the poems of Nathalia Crane, Brooklyn "prodigy," were written by her or are the product of a "delectable deception" is a literary controversy of asborbing interest opened by Edwin Markham, gray-bearded honorary president of the poetry society of America.

Markham, who last year won the $200 poetry review prize for his poem on Poe, called into question the authority of Nathalia's two books of poetry published before she was 12 years old. "The Janitor's Boy" and "Lava Lane."

In a letter to a Brooklyn newspaper Markham wrote:

"The sophisticated viewpoint of sex and on life, the special knowledge of history and archaeology found in these poems, place them beyond the reach of any juvenile mind.

"Unquestionably the whole thing is a genial hoax, fabricated perhaps by four young men and two young women while lingering over the wine and walnuts—all of them distinguished ports, with dextrous pens, and all determined to break the monotony of the hour with this delectable deception. This is a moment in Merry America."

Clarence P. Crane, Nathalia's father, grew heated, when told of this opinion.

"If this is the way great poets are supposed to act," he commented, "and if this is the courtesy of the craft, then I must conclude that the whole brood are a pretty poor lot."

Lawrence Ogden to Receive Gold Medal

Maryville Man Is One Of Thirty-Four Stockmen Who Produced Ton Litter Of Pigs.

Lawrence Ogden, south of Maryville, is one of the thirty-four Missouri stockmen, who will receive gold medals in recognition of their success in producing ton litters of pork in the 1925 Ton-Litter contest of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

Each of these men produced a litter of pigs that reached a weight of 2,000 pounds or more within 180 days from date of farrow, and each will receive a gold medal from the Missouri Livestock Association. The medals will be awarded at Columbia on Hog Day at Farmers' Week, Wednesday, January 20.

Mr. Ogden's prize winning litter consisted of ten Durocs, which weighed 2,070 pounds.

The thirty-four litters were produced at an average cost of $7.15 per cwt., a figure which shows that the practice of pushing spring pigs to the fullest extent is an economical practice. According to the records kept on all these litters in the extension office of the college, every litter reaching the ton mark in the alloted 180 days had, in addition to grain, either skim milk or tankage.

Two Are Injured in Automobile Wreck

Tire Is Blown Out And Passengers Are Thrown Out Of Cars In Accident Near Wilcox.

Two occupants of an Overland roadster were seriously injured and the third had a narrow escape when a tire of their automobile blew out yesterday afternoon near the Redman hill, north of Wilcox. All three were thrown from the car.

The injured were Miss Ruth Atkinson of Burlington Junction, a teacher near Quitman, who was driving, and Walter Joslin, who lives near Quitman. The former's left shoulder and several ribs were broken and she was severely bruised. She was unconscious for some time and it was feared that her injuries might prove fatal, but she was reported better today.

Joslin's left hand was severely mashed.

Miss Esther Atkinson, a sister of the injured girl, was thrown through the top of the car, but was not seriously injured.

The automobile was coming south down the hill and was traveling at a good speed when the tire blew out. A witness said it struck a banister at the side of a fill, but members of the party said it did not. They could not say whether or not the car turned over. It was upright when it came to a stop, but was badly damaged.

Art Garten of Maryville passed by soon after the accident and took the injured persons to a physician in Burlington Junction.

13 TEAMS IN CAGE TOURNEY

ONE OR TWO MORE MAY ENTER COLLEGE EVENT.

SAM DUBIN, REFEREE

Drawing for Play in High School Championship Event to Be Friday Morning

Thirteen high school basketball teams have been entered in the Northwest Missouri tournament which will be held at the State Teachers College gymnasium on Friday and Saturday.

There may be one or two more entries, according to M. E. Seleeman, director of information at the College, who is in charge of the entries.

The drawing for the tourney will take place at 9 o'clock Friday morning and play in the initial round will start soon after. The game will be divided so that there will be play on Friday morning, afternoon, and night, to complete all but the semi-final and final rounds.

On Saturday the tournament will be completed, with the final game Saturday night. This will make it possible for the teams in the last two rounds to get plenty of rest between games.

The manner in which the drawing will take place has not yet been arranged. E. W. Glenn, of the College faculty, is in charge of the drawing.

Sam Dubin of Bedford, Ia., will referee the games of the tournament.

Headquarters for the tourney will be at the Maryville Chamber of Commerce. Here the different teams will register on coming to Maryville and from this place the rooms will be assigned.

No entries which bear a postmark of later than Nov. 15 will be accepted for the tournament. Following is the list so far submitted:

Grandview, Grundy County; Converse, Clinton; Polo, Caldwell; Cainesville, Harrison; Rosendale, Andrew; Laredo, Grundy; Hardin, Ray; New Point, Holt; Daleview, Atchison; Easton, Buchanan; Stewartsville, DeKalb; Jameson, Daviess; and Pickering, Nodaway.

NO SUCCESSOR FOR WOODSON

ty, and then went to the St. Louis Law school, from which he was graduated in 1877.

Appointed Circuit Judge in 1890.

He was appointed judge of the circuit court of Buchanan county by Governor Francis, December 18, 1890, and in 1892 was elected to the same office for a six-year term. He was re-elected in 1898. He was elected judge of the supreme court of Missouri for the long term in November, 1906, and in 1916 was re-elected for a 10-year term.

Judge Woodson was married to Miss Bettie Oliver of Platte City, April 13, 1886. Mrs. Woodson has been dead some time. Two children, Mrs. Lorene Robinson and Archelaus M. Woodson, Jr., both of Jefferson City, survive.

Burial to Be in St. Joseph.

Judge Woodson is also survived by four brothers, William E., Ben J. and Dr. C. R. Woodson, all of St. Joseph, and David C. Woodson of Kansas City. He was a member of the Christian church of Jefferson City.

The body will be brought to St. Joseph, probably Tuesday, and burial will be beside his wife at Mount Mora cemetery.

Judge Woodson's hobby was gardening and farming. Shortly after his election to the supreme court bench he rented a large lot in the capital city and for many years his garden was known as one of the best in the city. He did all of the work himself.

In recent years he rented farm lands four miles west of Jefferson City, but because he could not devote the time to the management of the property the farming venture was not a big success.

Around Our Town

'Twas a jolly fine mornin' for a stroll. Took a sachet around the residential district about 8 o'clock, before most of the residents of Maryville were up for the day.

The sound of the alarm clocks was chime-like. Quite a contrast to Sunday morning. That is the only day in the week when most alarm clocks get a rest. Then the inhabitants are awakened by the bells which tell the story that Sunday School is over and church is about to begin.

'Twas Monday morning, but the sky looked no bluer than any other day.

Automobiles receive more than their share of maledictions on mornings such as this. Most men would rather use profanity than the choker. And it's not nearly so pursuasive.

The weather is so silken. Changeable silk. But "whether it's cold or whether it's hot, we'll have weather, whether or not."

Met a little boy without an overcoat or gloves. "Fine morning," he said. Then, met a man in a fur coat getting out of a big automobile. "Oh hello," I said, and he just grunted. Perhaps the fact that the man was married and the lad wasn't has something to do with it.

The Nodaway County Health Department is a sanitary place. And why shouldn't it be? Isn't Dr. Fryer C. P. (Chemically Pure)?

According to statements made by Walter Smith undoubtedly Martin Lewis Jr., will resort to most any method to maintain his boasted reputation as a rabbit hunter. According to Smith, in the last weekly rabbit hunt, Lewis carried a shot gun during the whole hunt, but returned to town with one, only one, rabbit, which by the way was killed with a rifle. Now Smith does not make any accusations, but it is still a mystery to him as to just what became of the rabbit that was killed by the little lad that accompanied Martin on his hunt and tramped most of the brush piles for him. Smith vouches that the boy had a rabbit when he joined the hunting party, but when Martin hurriedly cranked the flivver to return to town this little lad was short his rabbit and was unable to find it. Again Smith will vouch that he heard Martin volunteer to carry this said rabbit after he had failed in every attempt to maintain his reputation as a rabbit hunter and a marksman.

It is just another of those daily unsolvable questions that comes up and leave us in doubt. It can only be made clear by some explanation.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. Rath (© W. J. Watt and Co.)

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

JOHN W. BROOKE, widower and hardware magnate, arranges with a firm of efficiency engineers to manage his home for two months while he is out of town. His three grown children, Constance, Billy and Alice, are unaware of this arrangement. Not until

H. HEDGE, efficiency engineer, appears on the scene do they realize the enormity of their father's digression. Hedge has cut off Billy's allowance because he refuses to work; he has reinstated Constance because she has finally decided to become his secretary; Alice is on the pay roll because she is still going to school.

Among the many "unbearable," things accomplished by Hedge was the prevention of an elopment with Constance and Tommy Treadwell the principal actors. Constance seems to be using entirely successful tactics in bearding the efficiency bug. Today she suceeded in getting his personal attendance and approval in the purchase of a long list of wearing apparel.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

In the library, after dinner, that night, Hedge was so unsociable that Constance presently drifted into the music-room, where she played for an hour or so. The efficiency man sat at his big desk working furiously over books and reports. He did not once send for his secretary.

"It's possible she got the idea that money was being spent in the same old reckless fashion. She won't have it long."

When finally he reached the matter of accounts he took his memorandum-book from his pocket and began a swift tabulation.

The result astonished him so that he checked it up twice, only to be come annoyed at the time wasted in verifying a simple sum of addition.

"Economy, just the same," he muttered, scowling at the figures. "It was a matter of need. I made that perfectly clear to her. There is no possibility that she misunderstood. If I find she did I'll not fail to make it absolutely plain."

He chewed an unlighted cigar for several minutes, still scowling.

"It's just possible that she got the idea," he said, "that money was being spent in the same old reckless fashion. She won't have it long. I'll get it out of her head. I'll do it now!"

He arose with decision and strode across the hall in the direction of the music-room.

Constance was still sitting at the piano, her back toward him. The efficiency man halted on the threshold, listening and watching. She was quite unconscious of his presence. What she played he did not know. It was alternately lively and melancholy.

Her body swayed slightly with the music, rythmically, bouyantly, sometimes droopingly, as though she were a part of the melody itself. H. Hedge swayed likewise, although he did not know it.

Then, after a little, as the music began to quaver and die away, the efficiency man turned noiselessly and tiptoed back to the library.

"I'll tell her tomorrow," he said.

Constance, occasionally smiling to herself at a reminiscence, was spending a busy morning in the library. H. Hedge was somewhere else. This gave her unmolested opportunity to examine the bills from the shops, for one thing. Their dimensions gratified her. Yet even the bills did not occupy chief place in her thoughts. That was reserved for the efficiency man.

"He's not nearly so efficient as I thought—poor thing," she murmured as she took up a pile of report cards. "Why, even Tommy Treadwell—"

Now, as Constance busied herself thus, with all the outward appearance of a secretary rather than a schemer, she chanced to notice that the bottom drawer on the right-hand side of the desk was open about two inches. This was unusual, because the efficiency man had a habit of keeping this drawer locked. Just, why, she never knew; but she presumed that he stored personal papers there. She had never taken the last interest in the contents of the drawer.

But so long as it was opn, she decided to make an examination. Pulling it all the way out, she explored the contents. On top of a pile of papers, she found a fat, leather-bound book. It took but a glance to identify it as a diary, and the writing on its pages was in the familiar hand of H. Hedge.

Nothing is more wickedly fascinating than to read somebody else's diary, in the original, and to realize that you are probably the first intruder. Constance's conscience tugged gently at her elbow, but she ignored its reminder, although she was conscious of it. Curisoity, one of the world's greatest educators, was directing her now; and besides, the diary might have an important bearing upon the campaign.

She found the entries rather commonplace at first. They dealt with things wholly outside the Brooke mansion, and prior to the arrival of the efficiency man. The diary was a mixture of closely written script and shorthand. Constance perforce skipped the latter, because she could not read it. Even after the diary reached the day on which he took charge of the household, she did not find it of much interest. Day after day, for several weeks, it was a simple record of events that she knew only too well; colorless, terse, and with many abbreviations.

But then came an entry that caused her to sit straighter in the big chair.

Will write book. Data and results too valuable to be lost to world.

That was news! H. Hedge was going to write a book.

"A novel, I wonder?" murmured Constance. "What a queer novel it would be!"

She continued her exploration with thoroughly awakened interest. For several days there was no further reference to a book, unless hidden in the undecipherable pothooks. And then:

"Good title would be, "Putting the Home on a Business Basis;" or, "Knocking the Graft Out of the American Household." Great chance for valuable publication of pioneer work along this line.

Constance was faintly disappointed. The subject sounded dull and unromantic; yet none the less, she had a personal interest in the "pioneer work," as she pursued her investigations further. References to the book became more frequent as the idea laid hold upon the mind of the efficiency man and began to shape itself. She found one, for instance:

Devote at least one chapter to waste and inefficiency in homes of idle rich. Unscientific methods. Nonproducing family members. Money thrown away. Describe wicked triviality of life in average home. Illustration—Brooke.

Constance frowned as she gathered from this that her home was to be held up to the world as a horrible example. She wondered if the efficiency man would have the hardihood to mention names, and she intended to speak to her father about it as soon as he returned.

Then another entry, several days later:

Chapter on C. Use her as typical idle rich girl. No occupation. No useful education.

Constance gasped, but read on:

Lack of mental discipline. No fixed purpose in life. Chief amusement, extravagance. Good material here. Say that C is—

At this point the efficiency man dropped into shorthand again, running on for half a page. Constance stared at the hieroglyphics and gritted her teeth. There was no mistaking the identity of "C"—it was herself. And she was going to have an entire chapter!

"Say that C is—" Well, what? The shorthand maddened her. Any man, she abruptly decided, who would cloak his opinions in shorthand was a coward. She could not read a single one of the several hundred characters, yet she knew that every hated symbol directly concerned herself. Ah! There was even confirmation of it at the bottom of the page, for here, in longhand, H. Hedge remarked:

Elaborate, indeed? Constance was becoming as angry as she was curious. She turned a page. Here was more of it:

Advisable to subdivide. Make two chapters on C. First, show C as found, representing undesirable type. Second, show C as reformed, after aplication of scientific methods.

Constance's cheeks were flaming.

Be careful to explain that no exaggeration is employed. Describe accurately, impartially. Use frequent illustrations—acts, words, general attitude of resentment toward efforts to improve.

"It's unspeakable!" she exclaimed aloud. "I'll have him publicly whipped from the house—by the servants."

And then:

Second chapter on C—"As She Is." Trace gradual influence of reform. Show change in attitude. Show how firm insistence on new methods brought results. Note C's willingness to work. Marked change in manner. Happy influence of scientific methods. Point out how type originally represented by C may be transformed under proper direction. Show that dominant mind, working on scientific lines, can always control weaker mind. Even the C type not hopeless. Show effect of rigid discipline, insistence on authority, mental suggestion, et cetera.

Constance flung the manuscript on the table and sprang to her feet. Her hands were clenched and quivering. For an instant she stood irresolute; then stepped swiftly across the room and rang for Horace.

"Find Mr. Hedge and send him here at once!" she commanded.

The butler disappeared hastily, alarmed at the expression in her eyes.

NEXT CHAPTER: Hedge renounces efficiency.

Croy Says His Home Town Guesses Wrong

Characters Usually Don't Recognize Themselves In His Books And Stories, Novelist Says.

The following is taken from Saturday's Kansas City Star:

Homer Croy of Paris, New York and Maryville, Mo., is in Kansas City today with much interesting gossip of all three places, where he occasionally sojourns. His recollections of Maryville, where he has spent the last week are just a shade the most amusing, since it is there that the originals of his characters in "West of the Water-tower," and "R. F. D. No. 3" live.

Maryville, having a native novelist, is a town where every mother believes her son may grow up to be a rural hero and every quaint old character has a hope of being a quaint old character in one of Mr. Croy's books.

"The beauty of it is," says the author, "Maryville usually guesses wrong as to who the originals are. I fool them by the makeup I use. I may describe a certain man's characteristics minutely, but if I put whiskers on him and he is smooth shaved every whiskered man in town will be considered as the original.

"As a matter of fact most of my characters are composites in characteristics and autobiographical in psychology. I remember the way friends of my youth acted and I remember how I thought, and with these two considerations I am often able to progress some two or three chapters out of my story, which means that I've had that much work for nothing and have to retrace my footsteps. The Maryville residents never behave right when they move about in my head. In 'R. F. D. No. 3' Higbee went half way through the book as the skinflint villain, but he wound up being the hero and marrying the girl. That's what a Maryville man will do when he gets in a book.'

The game of naming characters is a lot of fun for the Missouri novelist. He selects the name of someone he has known and plans it on a character. In this way he once named a constable after another Missouri writer, who is something of a dandy in New York. The man called him up and explained in a mournful tone that of course he recognized that it was funny, but that his cousins and aunts didn't have a funny bone in their bodies and asked what would they think. Mr. Croy stopped the presses and changed the name.

Mr. Croy's next book is to deal with a group from Kansas and Oklahoma is placed in Paris.

"It's a comedy" he explained. "When I was young and had nothing to worry about I could write tragedies, but now that I'm getting old and disillusioned I write comedies."

Mr. Croy will leave for Chicago tonight.

So He Never Called on Her Again

Jack Long, 20, of Los Angeles, left the home of his sweetheart one night and was waylaid by two rival suitors. They put him in a barrel, nailed it up and put it on a railroad track. Long managed to roll himself off the track and went down a 20 foot embankment, where he was found hours later. He is recovering in a hospital.

Service the Foundation of Profit

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) states, without hesitation, that it is in business and is organized to make a profit.

It believes that no apology for profit making is necessary—that profit making is as serviceable to the consumers of its products as it is to the stockholders.

Profits are the result of needed service—efficiently supplied. Without profits, service is impossible.

Out of its profits, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) finances its increased facilities for service. Out of these profits it extends its service and builds for ampler and fuller service in the future. Out of profits it pays its 50,000 stockholders for the use of their money.

Standard Oil Company (Indiana) storage and service stations, spread over the length and breadth of the Middle West, are expressive evidences of service.

Into the farming regions of the west, service carried Standard Oil Company (Indiana) tanks and tank wagons, in advance of settlement. This service was of inestimable value to men struggling to force the land to produce and in the end has been profitable to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Every expansion of this Company—bulk storage stations—modern refineries—scientific and technical equipment—all are essential service factors and all are made possible by profits through service.

Every one will admit that oil has been an essential factor in the development of the Middle West. Motorists, farmers, business men—in fact, every one—will acknowledge, that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been a major factor in bringing oil products to automobiles, to factories, to farms, to homes, with a guarantee of dependability and of quality.

To render this essential service would have been utterly impossible except for the ability of the Management to conduct the affairs of this Company so that profits could be returned to the stockholders.

Profits are the inducement for capital to invest. The ability to create profits has enabled the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to attract the capital necessary for its expansion.

This Company has proved in its long experience, that economies of production and distribution can be achieved only through a heavy investment of capital and a highly perfected organization, working with enthusiasm and sustained energy.

PARLIAMENT IN SESSION AGAIN

MINISTRY UNDER FIRE FROM LABOR AND LIBERALS

NO FORMAL OPENING

London, Nov. 16 (United Press)—Parliament today resumed its sittings after a recess of fourteen weeks.

When the opening gavel fell in the House of Commons early this afternoon Premier Stanley Baldwin and his cabinet were lined up in full strength on the government bench—determined to concentrate attention on the successes of their foreign policy in order to parry inevitable, embarrassing questions on domestic and colonial affairs.

Tariffs, unemployment, trade depression, agriculture, the coal situation, industrial unrest, governmental expenditure, and Mosul were the chief targets on which the big guns of the opposition parties were trained. The government, on the other hand, were prepared to parade bfor Parliament and the people such achievements as the results of the Locarno security pact conference and its resumption of relations with Mexico.

There was no state opening today and therefore no speech from the Throne, inasmuch as it was merely the resumption of a session and not the commencement of a new Parliament.

Despite today's lack of pomp and ceremony, the lobbies were buzzing early with criticism of the government's attitude toward Mosul and its alleged inaction in relieving the worst trade depression known in all the centuries of Britain's history. The Commons galleries were packed with privileged spectators when the Speaker took his seat.

A major portion of the public interest was centered on the indomitable Lloyd George, at the head of the Liberal section of seats, who still is virtually unparalleled for pitiless criticism. The campaign for land reform recently launched by him throughout the country has attracted wide attention and forced the administration into a position where it will have to come out with a definite agriculturetl policy during the present session.

Other interest turned chiefly to ex-Premier Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor leader, who leads the official opposition, and to a number of rebel members of Baldwin's own Sonservative party.

The program for the first week's work in the Commons was, in itself, merely of a routine nature,—taking up the threads of business, where they were dropped on August 7. Any fireworks to be provided during the first week were expected to come through questions and private notices of motions. It was thought that MacDonald would ask that a day be fixed for debating the Locarno agreements, and that some time next week would be set apart for this. Another day next week probably will be devoted to Mosul.

The biggest and bitterest debate of the session probably will be that occasioned by the introduction, some time before Christmas, of the finance bill. This is one of the measures which, laborites and Liberals claim, the government is using to cloak a gradual introduction of protective tariffs such as the country rejected when a general election in 1922 put the country's first Labor government into office.

If Baldwin succeeds in maintaining the Conservative ranks intact, he will have little to worry about, as the Tories still have a working majority of over 200 seats. The status of Parliamentary seats today was: Conservatives 413; Laboratories, 152; Liberals, 40; Independents (including one Communist), 5, and Constitutionalists, 4.

In the Hous of Lords, today's proceedings and the prospects for the session were largely tedious routine, devoid of excitement. The peers' chief diversion was in getting accustomed to the use of new microphones and ear pieces, which have been installed during the past few weeks to meet the acoustic problems of the Chamber.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Wheat dropped sharply in today's session on the Chicago Board of Trade. Coarse grains held firm until the last hour and then eased off to the previous finish.

A reducing movement was responsible for wheat's slump. The principal motive seemed to be anxiety among skeptical longs, created by a more liberal rivals of Canadian wheat and sales in the Northwest marketes to come here.

Corn eased off in the last hour. Local longs sold late.

Oats weakened in sympathy with general market sentiment.

Provisions held firmly to the close at the peak price of the day. Shorts were brisk buyers.

THIS WEEK IN MISSOURI HISTORY

Compiled by
The State Historical Society of Missouri, Columbia
Floyd C. Shoemaker, Secretary
November 15-21.

Editor's Note: Many of the modern problems of state government were first forcibly presented to the people of Missouri in their second constitutional convention of 1845. Such were the limitations on the power of the legislature and fair representation for the populous counties. The beginnings of a definite term and an election tenure for judges were set forth, in fact, this convention, herein described, made many precedents which have been followed to this day. It might be named the Pathfinder in the field of modern constitution making in Missouri.

When the tidal wave of Jacksonian Democracy spread over the nation in '20s and '30s of the last century, one of the first states engulfed was Missouri. Here it resulted in a political organization which controlled the commonwealth for three decades, broke the influence of such eminent and beloved public men as John Scott and David Barton, and placed in almost autocratic power the greatest statesman of the West, Senator Thomas H. Benton.

The new movement led by "Old Hickory" meant all things to all men. It won remarkable victories and it suffered decisive defeats, but it effected changes in public mind and political machinery which have persisted in strength and power to this day. Some of the latter were first forcibly brought before Missourians in their second proposed constitution.

Eighty years ago this week, on November 17, 1845, Missouri's second constitutional convention assembled in Jefferson City. Among the 66 delegates were men who later wielded power as governors, congressmen, and senators, and helped direct the destinies of state and nation for a quarter of a century in peace and war. Within two months they framed a constitution which attempted to meet the needs of the day. Among these needs were some which reflected the new democracy of the West, others which reflected distrust of it.

The new constitution changed the terms of office of the entire judiciary from a life term to a term of years, and the circuit judges were placed on an elective instead of an appointive tenure. These changes reflected the new political thought of the West which had been growing stronger for over two decades.

Showing distrust even of the people's representatives were the provisions incorporated in the new document relating to the legislature. In Missouri's first constitution of 1820 the limitations of the legislature were conspicuous for their absence. Now many prohibitions and restrictions relating to finance, special legislation, length of legislative sessions, and popular referendum on amendments were set forth. Many of these provisions, altered to meet a later day, found their way into our present fundamental law.

But the most important change proposed, excepting that relating to the judges, was on the ratio of representation in the House of Representatives. The constitution of 1820 limited the membership of the House to 100 but provided that each county should have at least one representative. In 1845 Missouri had 96 counties and new ones were waiting organization. Moreover, the old populous counties were being badly discriminated against as regards any proportional representation based on population.

A compromise was effected whereby representation was based on a ratio. This ratio was obtained by dividing the total number of free white inhabitants by 100. Counties were given representation as follows: for 3-5 ratio, one representative; 1 2-3 ratio, two representatives; 2 2-3 ratio, three; and 4 ratio, four. Counties with less than 3-5 ratio were to be joined to other counties under certain conditions, and to have one representative under different conditions. The compromise was not satisfactory to the rural districts and was one of the causes for the rejection of the constitution by the people in 1846.

Record Kicker

Here's John Cavosie, captain of the Ironwood (Mich.) high school eleven, who stepped into the limelight by drop-kicking a 55-yard field goal recently. He's called the greatest gridder turned out in that section since the days of the late George Gipp, Notre Dame's All-America celebrity. Cavosie averages around 70 yards as a punter and also stars in baseball and basketball.

Something Needs Cleansing Now

Save wear by having it done at once.

Winter weather is hard on clothing. Not only the overwraps and furs, but the suits and dresses, too, are being impregnated with foreign matter. It comes from the chimneys. Sharp, gritty particles that work underneath the surface of fabrics and damage them. Soot that smudges the surface.

How often each day is it necessary to wash your face and hands? . . . . Then is it logical to wear garments through a whole winter without having them cleansed?

Something needs Cleansing now. Besides the garments you want to keep looking at their best there are many articles in the home—hangings, slip-overs, etc.

	Won	Lost	Tied	Pct.
Maryville	3	0	1	1000
Springfield	2	1	1	.667
Warrensburg	1	2	1	.333
Cape Girardeau	1	2	0	.333
Kirksville	0	2	1	.000

As far as the championship is concerned, the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association football race is over. The Maryville State Teachers College eleven stands supreme, undefeated. Springfield is second, and Warrensburg is third.

To date, Cape Girardeau is fourth and Kirksville is in the cellar. One more game remains of the round-robin schedule. This week Kirksville and Cape Girardeau meet at Kirksville. If the home team wins, it will take fourth place in the conference percentage column. If it loses, it will remain at the foot of the list. A tie game would have the same effect.

Saturday, Cape Girardeau broke the heart of all conference dopesters when she won from the strong Warrensburg team. Perhaps the victory may be termed a fluke. Beatty, Cape player, recovered a fumble in the first two minutes of play and raced 40 yards for a touchdown. Goal was kicked.

In the rest of the game, Warrensburg made twenty first downs to one for the Cape, but long-distance punting at the toe of Duckworth guarded the goal line.

To show just how emphatically forecast was upset, Warrensburg has previously beaten Springfield by seven points, while Springfield had walloped the Capesters, 40 to 0.

Kirksville won a non-conference tilt from Culver-Stockton Saturday, 19 to 7.

The Maryville championship was a thorough one. Victories over Warrensburg, Kirksville, and Cape Girardeau, and a tie with Springfield were the local portion. No other team did so well.

The Springfield hopes for a title were blasted in an early-season defeat at the hands of Warrensburg. Maryville knocked the props from under the Mules, and Cape rubbed it in.

Kirksville lost to Maryville and Springfield, and tied with Warrensburg.

Last year the Kirksville team played the entire season without a defeat, two tie games being the only mar to a perfect season.

A summary of the season shows that all five teams were strong, but that the power was with Maryville and Springfield.

High Tributes Are Paid E. S. Matteson

Son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Matteson Is Declared Monroe County's Most Valuable Citizen.

Tributes to E. S. Matteson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Matteson of this city and brother to Mrs. J. F. Hull, were paid at a recent chamber of commerce banquet held in Paris, Monroe County, at which Mr. Matteson was declared "Monroe County's most valuable citizen." He formerly lived on a farm near Parnell and is now Monroe County farm agent.

The Monroe County Appeal of Paris tells of the tributes to Mr. Matteson as follows:

"That E. S. Matteson is Monroe county's most valuable citizen because he is doing more to advance the material interests of the people at large was asserted by several speakers at the Chamber of Commerce banquet in Paris last Friday evening. Special attention was called to the liming of soil, the introduction of alfalfa, the development of soybean culture, improved methods for the economical production of pork and other practical things by which farm profits are being increased and better times inaugurated under his energetic leadership.

"The peppiest talk of the evening was made by E. M. Alexander in behalf of the paving project and the work of the Chamber of Commerce is doing in co-operation with the Farm Bureau organization in providing lime for those who are undertaking to build up their soil under County Agent Matteson's direction."

NO GAME HERE TURKEY DAY

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL IS LOSING MONEY ON FOOTBALL.

COLLEGE GAME OFF

Bearcats Will Not Meet Buena Vista As Was Scheduled For This Week.

The football game which the State Teachers College was to have played this Friday against Buena Vista College has been cancelled. An agreement was reached between the two schools this morning to call off the game.

On the part of the local school, the game was cancelled for two reasons: the fall quarter at the College ends next Wednesday and the school hesitated to send its team away on a trip in the midst of final examinations; and the athletic department will be busy with the high school basketball tournament which will be held at the College gymnasium.

It is likely that the Thanksgiving morning game which was to have been played here between the Maryville and Excelsior Springs high school teams will be cancelled.

The local high school has lost $400 on its football season this year, and does not feel able to stand another loss on Thanksgiving.

"Much as we would like to play the game with Excelsior Springs, we cannot do so when we face almost certain financial loss," L. E. Ziegler, superintendent of schools, said today. "On the Lafayette game Saturday our expenses were $119 and we lost $101. Of course such a thing cannot continue. We lost $60 on the Cameron game the week before."

A high school is a community institution. So is it's football teams. Perhaps there may be some excuse for not supporting a losing team, but there can be no plausible one for failing to boost for a winner.

The Maryville High School football team is playing successful football. It may be termed a winning team. It is not being supported properly.

We owe it to our boys to support this community institution.

The football situation has reached a financial crisis at the Maryville High School. This is the case in practically all towns where there is a college. The fans seem to fail to realize that good high school football is as good in comparison as good college football. For the last three years, the crowds at local high school games have been dwindling, until those this season have not even been representative.

Hopkins and Parnell Games Are Postponed

Owing to bad roads there was no basketball game with Parnell at Hopkins Friday night. Very interesting games were expected with Parnell teams and there was much disappointment at the postponement.

Next Friday the Hopkins cagers, both boys and girls, will clash with Barnard at Hopkins.

The boys basketball team, with Coach McGrath, was excused from school and went to the football game between Maryville and Springfield. Football was new to most of the boys and they were intensely interested.

The Run of a Tow-Headed Boy Will Long Remain in History

Saturday afternoon on the College gridiron, a tow-headed, fleet-footed Maryville High School boy furnished the sensation of a football game and gave a handful of spectators the supreme thrill when he caught a kick-off on his own ten-yard line and raced 90 yards through a broken field for the only score of a chill-provoking, body-dampening contest.

Porterfield Cockayne will go down in the annals of the local institution as a star of stars. Always before, he has delivered the goods, but Saturday against Lafayette High of St. Joseph he made a run which will forever shine as startling, spectacular, victorious.

It was startling because it came when every other effort to score had been of no avail. It was startling because it came when least expected. It was startling because it awakened life in the two-dozen spectators and the twenty-two players.

The run was spectacular because he caught the kick-off in the shadow of his own goal and ran through eleven opponents for the touchdown. It was spectacular because he shook loose three and maybe four tacklers. It was spectacular because he outran seven others.

And it was victorious because it was the only score of the game. It came at the beginning of the second half. For thirty minutes the two teams had battled scorelessly. For the next twenty-nine minutes they fought equally so.

The field was only slightly slippery, but no game could have been played under much more disagreeable circumstances. A cold, biting wind chilled the spectators to the bone, and time and again the players stopped to blow on stiffening fingers. A misty rain fell during part of the contest, and at times the ball was more than slippery.

Maryville should have won. She had the better team. Not much better, but enough to deserve the victory. The locals led in first downs. Their punting was slightly superior, and their defense was a little tighter.

The Lafayette offense and defense alike centered around man. Even as Cockayne was the driving power of the Maryville team, ever urging his mates and always delivering when called on; so Crowell, the visiting fullback, was the mainstay of his eleven. He carried the ball well on the offense, but his defensive work was far better than that of any of the twenty-two players.

The Maryville team played better football than a week before against Cameron. There were several "bones" but blame them on the day and the weather. Suffice to say, they won.

The game was a financial failure for the Maryville school. Unofficial estimates have it that the local high school is now about $400 in debt on this season. Certainly support has been lacking.
